JUDGE IN B. & M. CASE ACCUSED

Dramatic Scene in U. S. Court as Affidavit Is Read; Papers to Grand Jury; Receiver Named

President James H. Hustis of the Boston & Maine was today appointed interlocutory receiver of the road by Judge William L. Putnam of the United States Circuit Court.

The action was taken after a court session as stormy any dramatic as any the Federal Building ever saw, as a climax to which Judge Putnam withdrew from the case because of charges that he was biased in favor of the directors of the Boston & Maine.

The receivership was asked by the Intercontinental Rubber Company of

JOHNSON FAVORED BY BETS IN WEST

San Francisco Aug. 29.—The biggest political betting California has seen in years was being done here today with the management of Republican affairs in the state and the political future of George Hiram Johnson hanging in the balance. Johnson and Willis H. Booth are running neck and neck for the Republican nomination as Senator. Betting favors Johnson. If he wins the nomination it will mean almost complete reorganization of the State Republican machine.

Lynn Merchants to Run Steamers if Strike Comes

Following a meeting today of the Lynn Chamber of Commerce, President Ralph S. Bauer announced that the chamber had voted to charter two steamers to be used in transporting freight to and from Boston in the event of a strike on the Boston & Maine.

The Bay State Street Railroad has offered to assist in relieving congestion of freight, if a strike comes, by allowing the use of special cars over the lines to and from Boston.

The General Electric Company of Lynn also stands ready, according to Mr. Bauer, to furnish a large number of automobile trucks in an emergency.

Army of 160,000 Pushes Way Through Mountains; Bridges Across the Danube Blown Up

Vienna, via Berlin wireless, Aug. 29.—Large Russian forces are reported in a dispatch from Budapest to have crossed the Rumanian frontier in the direction of Bulgaria, apparently with the purpose of cutting the railroad connecting Germany and Turkey.

London, Aug. 29.—Rumania has attacked Hungary. Russians are pouring through Rumania to attack Bulgaria, and along the whole 700-mile Rumanian frontier there has been scattered infantry firing, according to dispatches from many sources today.

Field Marshal von Mackensen, who is in supreme command of the Austro-German and Bulgarian armies in the Balkans, will direct the general campaign against Rumania, according to a Geneva dispatch.

Turkey and Bulgaria, according to dispatches from Berne, will declare war against Rumania within twenty-four hours. Bulgaria, according to another dispatch, has already blown up some bridges across the Danube. Rumania has already put an army of 600,000 men in the field, supported by 1,000 guns, says a dispatch from Bucharest, via Petrograd. The main Rumanian army will be commanded by General Iesko.

NOTABLE DEVELOPMENTS.

The entry of Rumania into the war with men fighting at many points. The developments thus far are these:

1—A Rumanian force, estimated by the Germans at 160,000 men, has begun the task of battering its way through the passes in the Transylvanian Alps toward the plains of Hungary.

2—A Rumanian force has been concentrated at Turnu Severin.

The Boston lads had lots of "pep" during the practice hour, and feel that two games today isn't too much to expect. They seem to have the best of the pitching, with Mamaux out of the way, as "Cal" is going to take a chance with his two youngsters, Jacobs and Evans, today, while Stallings had all his "vets" ready.

In the first game Tyler and Jacobs opposed each other on the mound.

Laws President Asks to Prevent Railway Strike

Washington, Aug. 29.—President Wilson's five propositions which he suggests as a remedy for the railway situation are for Congress:

To grant specific authority to the President to draft men and trains to keep in operation railroads on which strikes are declared, so that articles of public necessity, such as milk and foodstuffs generally, would be moved and all mails carried.

To provide for the basic eight-hour day in transportation industries.

To create a federal commission clothed with authority to weigh out the methods whereby the eight-hour day shall be put into effect.

To authorize the Interstate Commerce Commission, in fixing all railroad rates, to consider as an essential the wages paid by the various transportation companies.

To make unlawful any concert of action which would either cause a strike or a lockout before a complete investigation shall have been made by a board created by Congress along lines of power such as now are given to the Board of Mediation and Conciliation, and giving such board power to enforce its findings when its mediation fails.

Simon N. Pulver, Tailor on Summer Street, a Suicide

Simon N. Pulver, a tailor living at No. 42 Union Park street, committed suicide at his place of business at No. 57 Summer street early today with a 38-calibre revolver. Financial worries and domestic troubles are believed to have been responsible for his act.

The discovery was made by Louis Lineraman, an employe at the shop, when he went to work early today.

He entered the workroom back of the store and found the body of his employer reclining in a chair. The revolver was lying close by on the floor. In the building where Pulver's shop is located it was said that the dead man had a wife and three children.

Pulver had been living at No. 42 Union Park street for several months. For some time past, Pulver had complained of poor business, it was said at the Union Park street house today.

Six Bold Illinois Auto Bandits Get $16,000 Bank Loot

The interiors of both banks were wrecked. Silver money was scattered in the vaults and the banking rooms.

ADDRESSES JOINT SESSION AT 2:30

By International News Service.

Washington, Aug. 29. — President Wilson addressed the Senate and House of Representatives in joint session this afternoon, urging the passage of legislation by Congress to avert the threatened calamity of a national strike of railroad employes.

The President's address follows:

Gentlemen of the Congress:

I have come to you to seek your assistance in dealing with a very grave situation, which has arisen out of the demand of the employes of the railroads engaged in freight train service that they be granted an eight-hour working day, safeguarded by payment for an hour and a half of service for every hour of work beyond the eight.

The matter has been agitated for more than a year. The public has been made familiar with the demands of the men and the arguments urged in favor of them, and even more familiar with the objections of the railroads and their counter demand that certain privileges now enjoyed by their men and certain bases of payment worked out through many years of contest be reconsidered, especially in their relation to the adoption of an eight-hour day. The matter came some three weeks ago to a final issue and resulted in a complete deadlock between the parties.

The means provided by law for the mediation of the controversy failed and the means of arbitration for which the law provides were rejected.

The representatives of the railway executives proposed that the demands of the men be submitted in their entirety to arbitration, along with certain questions of readjustment as to pay and conditions of employment which seemed to them to be either closely associated with the demands or to call for reconsideration on their own merits, the men absolutely declined arbitration, especially. If any of their established privileges were by that means to be drawn again into question.

BROTHERHOOD CHIEFS DETERMINED TO ACT

The law in the matter put no compulsion upon them. The men were free, when the demands proved find voted to strike if their demands were refused, the strike was imminent. It has since been set for the fourth of September next. It affects the men who man the freight trains on practically every railway in the country. The freight service throughout the United States must stand still until their places are filled, if, indeed, it should prove possible to fill them at all.

Cities will be cut off from their food supplies, the whole commerce of the nation will be paralyzed, men of every sort and description will be thrown out of employment, countless thousands will in all likelihood be brought, it may be, to the very point of starvation, and a tragical national calamity brought on, to be added to the other distresses of the time, because on basis of accommodation or settlement has been found.

Just so soon as it became evident that mediation under the existing law had failed and that arbitration had been rendered impossible by the attitude of the men, I considered it my duty to confer with the representatives of both the railways and the brotherhoods and myself offer mediation, not as an arbitrator, but merely as spokesman of the nation, in the interests of business, and as a friend of both parties, but not as judge, only as the representative of one hundred millions of men, women and children who would pay the price, the inestimable price, of the suffering should these few men insist upon approaching and considering the matters in controversy between them merely as employers and employes, rather than as patriotic citizens of the United States looking before and after and accepting the larger responsibility which the public would put upon them.

AN EIGHT-HOUR DAY.

It seemed to me, in considering the subject-matter of the controversy that the whole spirit of the times and the unprecedented evidence of recent economic experience spoke for the eight-hour day.

It has been adjudged by the thought and experience of recent years a thing upon which society is justified in insisting as in the interests of health, efficiency, contentment and a general increase of economic well-being.

The whole presumption of modern experience would, it seems to me, be in favor of the view that arbitration or not, and the debatable points to settle were those which arose out of the acceptance of the eight-hour day rather than those which affected its establishment.

I therefore proposed that the eight-hour day be adopted by the railway managements and put into practice for the present as a substitute for the existing ten-hour basis of pay and service; that I should support with the permission of the Congress, a small commission to observe the results of the change, carefully studying the figures of the altered operating costs, not only, but also the conditions of labor under which the men worked and the operation of their existing agreements with the railroads, with instructions to report the facts as they found them to the Congress at the earliest possible day, but without recommendations, and that after the facts had been thus disclosed an adjustment should in some orderly manner be made of all the matters now left unadjusted between the railroad managers and the men.

POSITION OF COURT.

These proposals were exactly in line, it is interesting to note, with the position taken by the Supreme Court of the United States, when appealed to to protect certain litigants from the financial losses which they confidently expected if they submitted to the regulation of their charges and of their methods of service by public legislation. The court has held that it would not undertake to form a judgment upon forecasts, but could base its action only upon actual experience.

Passenger Crews Will Quit if Strike Is Called

All railroad transportation, freight or passenger, will be tied up by the strike, if it comes.

The union employes on passenger trains will go out with the men on freight trains and in the yards.

However, the men employed on passenger trains do not benefit by striking.

They continue to work ten hours a day, whether or not the strike is successful.

The eight hours a day and time and one-half for overtime demand is in behalf of only the union men handling freight trains.

If President Wilson has government operation of the railroads, however, union men interpret his recent statement as indicating an eight-hour day will be given to passenger as well as freight employes.

Men who start on runs before 7 a. m. on September 4, the day the strike is scheduled to go into effect, will finish their runs for that day. They will not desert their trains between stations or wherever they happen to be at 7 a. m.

Milk trains and trains of perishable freight will be run by the striking employes, if no passenger cars are hitched on to them.

The men will not sanction any "mixed" trains that include milk cars and passenger cars or cars carrying perishable freight and passenger cars.

"We are more anxious for the welfare of the babies than are the railroad presidents," said T. J. Lynch, vice-president of the B. R. T. general committee on the Boston & Maine.

Union men say the railroads will not be able to draft men from their car and locomotive shops to run engines. They say many yards on the New Haven have been operated on the eight-hour basis for years. On the Boston & Maine they are all on a ten-hour basis.

RAILWAY EMPLOYES DEFER STRIKE TO GIVE CONGRESS TIME TO ACT

Washington, Aug. 29.—Awaiting action by Congress and the President the railway strike vote has delayed the wiring of a final call to strike.

The brotherhood committee flatly rejected the proposal that they defer the golden rule effect of the eight-hour day for a period of two or three months, during which time a federal commission would work out details for the benefit of the railroads. They have also decided to stand squarely on the original acceptance of the President's eight-hour proposal without modification and will tell the President when they see him that they will carry out their strike program as arranged next Monday unless the railroads also accept.

The brotherhood chiefs were angry today for the first time since they came to Washington. They declared that the railroads plainly intended to force a strike and that they would accept the challenge. All of the heads of the four brotherhoods declared that the strike order when issued would be carried out regardless of any developments unless the railroads give in.

INSIST ON FIRST DEMANDS.

"We will stand firmly on our original demands if the issue is forced," declared Chief Garretson. "The railroads have not been fair at any time and the public will soon realize this fact."

The sub-committee of eight members of the four brotherhoods' organization went to the White House at 10:55 and immediately went into conference with President Wilson. They said on entering that they intended telling the President that they had done everything possible to prevent a general railway strike and that they could do nothing more. The majority of the presidents would leave for home this afternoon, they said, unless the President specifically requested them to stay.

EXPLAIN REFUSAL.

Emphatically linking issue with President Wilson's declaration that the eight-hour day "has the sanction of society," the railroad executives, in a lengthy statement this afternoon, explained why they have refused to accept President Wilson's offer of settlement. They declare that it would mean confiscation of their properties.

They then give the complete text of their counter proposition that all differences be submitted to arbitration, they recognizing the principles of the eight-hour workday, but not of the ten-hour pay basis, revenue to be compounded to make such payments retroactive should arbitration find them just.

This counter proposition differs only slightly in phraseology from the plan as originally made public last week.

TO SEE WILSON AGAIN.

Just after it was announced at the White House that the President definitely had agreed to go to Congress the conference of the committee of twenty-four of the brotherhoods representatives at the National Hotel broke up. Chief Stone of the engineers said:

"We are going to the White House shortly. We have been considering the propositions of legislation which the President has passed on to us, as well as the proposals of the railroad presidents. We have reached an agreement, but cannot indicate what it will be until after we have seen the President."

The President insists that the brotherhood chiefs refrain from taking any further action to call a strike.

The fact that the strike orders as issued call for the men to leave their work next Monday, Labor Day, at 7 o'clock in the morning, is of small consequence.

It simple means that the order will become effective if the brotherhood chiefs now on the ground send along the telegram which makes the strike order effective.

Both brotherhood representatives and railroad executives, however doubted the effectiveness of the legislative method of dealing with the situation. A small but powerful group of railroad heads, fearful of the ultimate consequences of drastic legislation, began the eleventh-hour movement to secure some sort of a peaceful settlement.

SEEKING PEACE BASIS.

They endeavored to work out a plan to be submitted to the President before he put the situation in the hands of Congress which would bring the crisis to an end. They were the men who have been counselling surrender to the President's plan in the executives' conferences from the beginning, and they sought to evolve some settlement basis which would embody the President's original proposal.

Their efforts were hampered, however, by the general bitter feeling among most of the railroad heads because the President had espoused the original contention of the men. Several of the executives announced their intention of leaving Washington today and abandoning all further efforts toward peace.

They declared that they proposed to be at home to protect their properties in the event of a strike. They took the position that the entire matter now was in the hands of the President and Congress and that their duty was merely to take up the task of fighting the proposed strike.

Practically all of the far western railroad presidents have arranged to leave for their homes this afternoon and tonight. They are convinced that the prevention of the strike now is up to Congress and that their place is back at their posts.

Railway officials say that if a modified Canadian plan law goes through Congress a strike will be impossible.

CANADIAN PLAN FAVORED.

Both sides indulged in considerable speculation as to the outcome of the President's legislative plan. The railroad executives believe that any plan proposed would carry with it some form a permanent plan for handling future wage disputes and this feature they were prepared to endorse. They hoped for a plan along the lines of the Canadian Disputes Act.

Meanwhile the President's advisors, hard at work on the form of the legislation, were confronted with the difficulty of securing an agreement in Congress.

The President's decision to take the fight to Congress aroused little enthusiasm among the legislators, and they asserted that the controversy had disrupted all plans of adjournment and all of the carefully laid plans of both Republicans and Democrats.

It was stated that the President has under consideration a plan appeal to the country at large, including both the railway employes and the executives, asking both sides to sacrifice their own interests, if necessary, to the public interest.

President Wilson's plan for new legislation by which the threatened railway strike may be averted, was adopted by the Senate Steering Committee. Democratic leaders were given to understand the President expects to be able to prevent the execution of a strike order pending the outcome of his efforts.

An eight-hour day to be compulsory for all railroads within thirty days after enactment is the pivot around which the new legislation will be constructed.

Before the new program became generally known the Brotherhood chiefs announced that the date set for the strike was the morning of September 4, which is Labor Day. A copy of the strike order was transmitted to the White House with an explanation of the departure of a number of Brotherhood chairmen.

The sub-committee of eight railway chiefs went to the White House. It is understood the President informed the committee he had knowledge of their intention to renew the demand for arbitration and asked them to defer such action.

Disturbed by this request which could not be ignored with propriety the representatives of the executives returned to their headquarters and issued a statement. In substance the railway presidents said if the strike was to be called on September 4 they believed they should be allowed to return to their several headquarters and prepare for the emergency.

EXPECT 30,000 TO STRIKE IN NEW ENGLAND

If the railway employes go out Boston will be one of the most important strike centres, as it will be the headquarters from which strikers on New England railroads will be directed.

The headquarters have already been secured. Two grand lodge officers are expected here before Sunday night. It is claimed that 30,000 men in New England will answer the strike call.

Vacationists and all-summer sojourners at beach and other resorts are alarmed at the prospect of a tie-up of railroad service beginning at seven o'clock next Monday (Labor Day) morning.

Boston merchants and manufacturers are preparing to co-operate with the Boston & Maine, Boston & Albany and New Haven systems in a co-ordinated system of railroad and motor truck service to keep food and milk moving if the strike starts to hold up these necessaries.

LOOKING FOR MEN.

The railroads are making a census of their non-union employes who can run locomotives or take other operating places.

Chairman Blake made a terse statement, as follows:

"The situation, in brief, is that the railroads have had every opportunity of reaching a settlement and they have refused. They want to work the men sixteen hours a day. This should have been stopped years ago. It is going to stop now."

The 20,000 railroad men who, according to union leaders, will answer the strike call in New England are grouped as follows:

Engineers	4,500
Enginemen and firemen	6,000
Trainmen	15,000
Conductors	4,500

MAY TIE UP EVERYTHING.

It is claimed—although no union official makes the statement for publication—that the strike will tie up everything.

Union leaders admit that this will create a most serious situation. But, in justification, they maintain that the blame will rest upon the railroad managements, not on the men.

The set of sealed instructions issued to the union men contains no provision for excepting milk trains from the general tie-up. The first paragraph of the instructions is sweeping and inclusive. It reads:

No man in road service involved in the strike will perform any service after the hour set to strike, unless he has already begun his trip and has actually left the terminal. If the train has left the terminal, he will complete the trip and deliver the engine and train at the end of the run, or tie-up point—if tied up under the law—after which he will perform no further service until the close of the strike. Men in other than road service will leave the service at the appointed time.

THEIR LEGAL RIGHTS.

The second paragraph of the sealed instructions informs the union men that they need have no fear of refusing to work mail trains because "so far as your legal right to strike is concerned, there is no difference between a mail train and a freight train."

The instructions warn the men, in strongest terms, to keep away from railroad property if a strike is called, to refrain from violence and obey the law generally.

RUSSIANS STRIKE AT BULGARIA

just east of the Iron Gates of the Danube, for an invasion of Serbia.

3—At Rustchuk, on the Danube, northwest of the great Bulgarian port of Varna, there has been a clash between Rumanian and Bulgarian troops.

4—Russian troops are hurrying across Rumania to strike at Bulgaria on the coast of the Black Sea.

The most important feature of the campaigns inaugurated by Rumania's entry into the war is the Russian attack on Bulgaria.

Russia for centuries has wanted Constantinople; now at last she has a chance to attain her ambitions there.

From the Rumanian frontier to Constantinople along the coast of the Black Sea is about 250 miles.

RUSSIAN SUPERIORITY.

To cross that territory, Russia must smash the eastern wing of the Bulgarian army, and she must rout the Turkish forces in the West.

But Bulgaria, facing pressure from Salonica and from Rumania, is not expected to be able to make any great resistance to the Russian advance in this region. And as for the Turks, to meet the Russian advance with any adequate force they must weaken their armies in the Caucasus—thus only making their situation worse in that region.

Neither Bulgaria nor Turkey can hope to match the Russians in men. Nor is it likely that they can meet them on equal terms in cannon and munitions.

The Russians must cross about 145 miles of Rumania territory before striking at Bulgaria. But Rumania will help their progress by every means, and they will be able to strike Bulgaria with undiminished strength.

The Rumanians, according to present indications, will leave the southern campaign to the Russians and the allies. She herself will strike northward into Bulgaria, where her territorial ambitions center.

BIG TROOP MOVEMENTS.

Once through the frontier mountains, she will meet no great obstacles to further progress.

Whether she has guns and munitions for a successful campaign is yet problematic. Certainly she should be able to outmatch the armies opposed to her, in numbers of men engaged.

All through the Balkans, according to dispatches today, there are extensive troop movements under way.

The Bulgarians north of Salonica are rearranging their forces so as to be able to meet this new menace. The Teutons in the same region are withdrawing men into Serbia, while a host of Teuton reinforcements concentrated along the Danube is being thrown into position to meet the threat from Rumania.

The Rumanians attacked in the Alps before news of the declaration of war reached the Teutonic forces there, it is reported from Berlin.

Nevertheless Berlin claims that the first rush of the Rumanians was checked and thrown back, the Rumanians losing some prisoners.

GERMAN AID READY.

Germany's prompt declaration of war against Rumania shows her intention to bolster the defense of Austria with all her power, and is in strong contrast to her failure to declare war against Italy when Italy attacked Austria, months ago.

Some military critics here believe that the Rumanians will not push their efforts to enter Hungary until the pressure of the Russians on the southern frontier has begun to make itself felt.

Turnu Severin, where a Rumanian army has been gathered for the invasion of Serbia, is the nearest point in allied territory to the railroad line from Berlin to Bagdad, where it runs through Belgrade.

Accordingly, it is believed an offensive will be opened here when the Teutons are engaged on other fronts.

The Kaiser, according to dispatches from Berlin, has been inspecting defensive works in Galicia, but will return to Berlin this week to confer on the new situation which has arisen.

The German government considers the economic and moral results of Rumania's entry into the war not less important than the military results, it is said.

Furthermore, grave uncertainty is now expressed in Berlin as to the attitude of Greece, and there is a tendency in the press there to hint at Greece's early entry on the side of the allies.

Prince Andrew of Greece is now in England, and much significance is attached to that fact, both here and in the Berlin press.

The departure of the Rumanian ministers from Berlin and Vienna has occurred. No disorder marked the event. Special trains were provided for them. The Rumanian minister to Berlin asked for a final conference with Dr. von Jagow, the German Foreign Minister, but this was refused.

WAR SUMMARY

The entrance of Rumania into the war touched off two new campaigns, which were developing today.

The first was an attack on Hungary, the second a drive southward at Bulgaria.

The Rumanians themselves seem to be prosecuting the drive into Hungary, while Bulgaria has been left to the Russians.

Thus far, there has been no fighting of importance. The hostilities have been mere outpost actions. The Rumanians, who according to Berlin are about 160,000 strong, attacked through two passes in the Transylvanian Alps, along the two main railroad lines from Rumania into Hungary.

Hermannstadt is their first goal in the westernmost of these attacks, while Kronstadt is their goal in the other.

Combined German and Austrian troops met the first advance and repulsed it, according to Berlin and Vienna.

Unofficial dispatches—but they come from Teutonic sources by wireless and are doubtless authentic—say that a large Russian force has crossed Rumania to strike at Bulgaria on the south.

The attack was begun near the coast, where it was not necessary for the attacking force to break the Danube barrier.

The purpose is twofold; first, to cut the railroad between Sofia and Constantinople—which is the Berlin to Bagdad railroad—and second, to strike at Constantinople itself.

For a time these campaigns inaugurated by Rumania's entrance into the war will be of the first importance in the war news; and open field fighting will undoubtedly continue for a considerable time—perhaps till the end of the war. There has been infantry firing at many points along the Rumanian frontier.

On the British front in Picardy there was little infantry fighting, but the British report some progress east of Delville wood. The French report that their Somme front was quiet.

The Germans continued today their strong efforts to recapture Fleury. Their attacks were unsuccessful, the French say. Paris further reports that in one of the battles about Verdun they gained some ground, strengthening their positions there. It begins to appear that the tide of battle at Verdun has definitely turned against the Germans.

Berlin reports the repulse of strong enemy attacks in the Somme region and also on the Russian front. Petrograd claims to have made some gains in the fighting against German and Austrian forces.

Rome reports Austrian attacks in the Trentino, and says they were all repulsed with little difficulty.

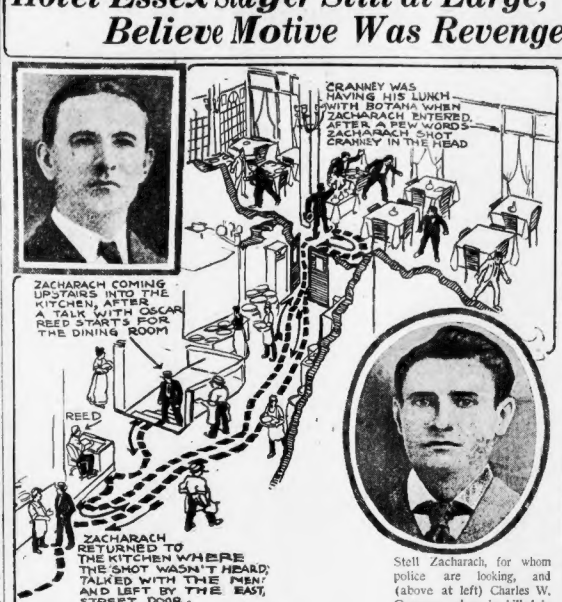
Hotel Essex Slayer Still at Large; Believe Motive Was Revenge



CRANNEY WAS HAVING HIS LUNCH WITH BOTANA WHEN ZACHARACH ENTERED. AFTER A FEW WORDS ZACHARACH SHOT CRANNEY IN THE HEAD
ZACHARACH COMING UPSTAIRS INTO THE KITCHEN, AFTER A TALK WITH OSCAR REED STARTS FOR THE DINING ROOM
REED
ZACHARACH RETURNED TO THE KITCHEN WHERE THE SHOT WASN'T HEARD, TALKED WITH THE MEN AND LEFT BY THE EAST STREET DOOR.

Diagram showing how Zacharach shot and killed Cranney in Hotel Essex dining room and escaped after talking calmly with hotel employes.

Stell Zacharach, for whom police are looking, and (above at left) Charles W. Cranney, whom he killed in broad daylight in Hotel Essex dining room.

Stell Zacharach, the waiter who shot and killed Charles W. Cranney, head waiter at the Hotel Essex, is still at large. Descriptions of him has been sent broadcast, and the police at every point around Greater Boston are searching for him.

Revenge is supposed to be the motive for the killing of Cranney, as he has had trouble with Zacharach at various times.

Cranney was threatened mysteriously less than three weeks ago, just after his marriage, and the police are endeavoring to find out whether Zacharach had a hand in the threat. One morning a bouquet of flowers was found tied to the Cranney mail box with a note attached which read:

"Pick out the flowers you like best; you'll need them."

DINING WITH FRIENDS.

Cranney did not regard this as a threat at the time, thinking some of his many friends were playing a joke on him because of his recent wedding.

The brief shooting occurred in the dining room on the second floor of the Hotel Essex while Cranney was eating his dinner with Albert Botana of No. 45 Falmouth street the assistant head waiter, and Cornelius O'Brien of No. 7 Pleasant street, South Boston, a friend of the dead head waiter.

According to the story told by various employes at the hotel, Zacharach has been in disfavor with the men there for some time. He has been employed at the hotel for more than fifteen years, and according to the men has been insubordinate of late.

EXCHANGE OF WORDS.

On the morning of the shooting Zacharach was detailed by Cranney to act as one of the waiters in the upper dining room. This did not seem to meet with favor on the part of Zacharach, and he disappeared.

At half past two Cranney went to get his dinner, as the rush of the noon hour was practically over. There were about ten guests in the room. Some of whom took any especial notice of the entry of Zacharach. He walked over to where Cranney was sitting, and turned his back over to him.

"Well," he said, "do you want anything more of me?"

"I want nothing more to do with you at all," replied Cranney.

Zacharach turned away without a word, and Cranney and the others turned again to their dinner. In another instant the guests were startled to hear a fusillade of shots. Practically every person jumped for shelter. One bullet struck Cranney in the left side of the forehead, and he pitched over on the table, dead. In the natural excitement that followed, Zacharach made his escape, and disappeared.

VICTIM RECENTLY MARRIED.

Cranney has been at the hotel for over a dozen years, and was one of the most popular men in the house. Just three weeks ago Cranney was married to Miss Mary Doyle of Watertown. Immediately on their marriage, they moved to a pretty home at No. 41 Alexander avenue, Medford.

An eyewitness of the murder said:

I was eating my dinner with two friends and suddenly heard at least three shots. I did not know whether it was some madman shooting up the dining room or who he was, so I jumped from my chair to a spot behind a pillar. From this point of vantage I saw the assassin throw out the shells of his revolver and reload it before running from the dining room. When I looked over to the table, the head waiter was lying on the floor.

Employes of the hotel characterize Zacharach as a bad man who has been incensed at Cranney for some time. When the union of waiters was strengthened at the Hotel Essex he applied for admission, and the sentiment was against allowing him to join. Finally he was made a member, but thought that it was Cranney who kept him out at first, and consequently here him considerable ill-will.

ACCUSED OF "PADRONISM."

Some of the men say, although they admit that they have no direct proof, that Zacharach was the head of an extensive "padrone" system. They allege that Zacharach was in the habit of making occasional visits to New York, when he would meet immigrant ships bringing Greeks to this country. He would pick out several youths and offer to get them work in hotels for a consideration. He then placed them as "bues" boys in hotels, splitting the proceeds with the head waiter that hires the boys. The men claim that Cranney was approached by Zacharach, but would not entertain the proposition.

Cornelius O'Brien of No. 1 Pleasant place, South Boston, a friend of the dead man, was sitting with him at the time. He was in the habit of coming to see him about that time on his way home. He said:

I was sitting at the table with Charley and Botana, and heard the conversation between the waiter and Cranney. The man gave him a look, and Cranney said, "I'm all done with you, and I don't want anything more to do with you."

I did not pay much attention to what was said, and we began to talk together again. Then I heard shots. It seems to me that there were at least three of them, and Cranney pitched onto the table and then rolled to the floor.

Looking up at the first shot I saw the man standing there with a smoking pistol. Everybody was so stunned that not a move was made to stop the man, who left the room immediately.

WHITE SLAVER IS ACCUSED BY GIRLS

New York, Aug. 29.—Three indictments have been returned against another alleged "white slaver" today. He is John Hausenreiter, twenty-seven years old.

He describes himself as a salesman, but the Grand Jury heard that he derived practically all of his income from young and pretty girls he is said to have forced to earn money for him through lives of shame.

Hausenreiter's wife was arrested, and their seven-year-old son was taken into custody by the children's society.

The stories the Grand Jury heard were far more abhorrent than the testimony given last week against Gustav Kugelman.

GIRL TELLS HER STORY.

Hausenreiter is said to have forced one girl to live and earn money for him in his own home, where his wife and child also resided.

Helen Kelves, nineteen years old, is the young woman, who it was alleged, was first victimized by Hausenreiter and then brought into his own home.

"Two and a half years ago, she told the Grand Jury, she came to New York from Chicago. She obtained a position in a "coffee house" on Lenox avenue, near One Hundred and Sixteenth street. Hausenreiter and many young men who lived on the earnings of girls frequently visited the place.

Miss Kelves said:

"One night he followed me from the place. He told me it was a shame for me to be working from eight in the morning until eight at night for a few dollars.

"Several nights later we took another walk. I permitted him to buy me a new dress and a hat. He concluded by telling me how much he loved me and then asked me to go to a hotel with him and have dinner. I did. The next morning I realized the mistake. I cried, and he took me to an apartment in One Hundred and Twenty-Sixth street. He furnished the place, and then brought men to visit me."

INTRODUCED TO WIFE.

"A short time ago he took me to Ninety-Sixth street. There he had a five-room apartment and introduced me to his wife and son.

"From April until August 18 I lived there. Every day he would either bring or send men to the place. Every night he would demand money from me. He took about $20 a day from me."

She stated that on August 18 she with $19 from her "master." He beat her, she said, until she divulged the hiding place. He took it from her and then struck her again. She caused his arrest.

Pauline Mix, a seventeen-year-old orphan, told the story of her downfall to the Grand Jury.

A year ago last May, she said, she met Hausenreiter. He told her he was unmarried, and went out with her regularly. He told her, she said, he had a rich uncle and that he wanted to marry her.

On March 29 last, she said, Hausenreiter was one of the guests at a feast at the home of relatives with whom she was living. As is customary at such affairs, she said, she drank a little wine. She became ill and went to her room.

"LAUGHED AT MY TEARS."

Hausenreiter, she said, was one of the last guests to say good night.

"But he didn't go out," she said. "He hid in the bathroom. Then he slipped into my room."

He laughed at her tears and told her, she said, that she must go out and make a living for him.

"But he always demanded money from me," she continued. "He would met me on the street and take whatever money I had. One day I had only twelve cents and was on my way to work. He snatched it from me."

British Ship Burned at Sea.

Gibraltar, Aug. 29.—The British schooner Saratora Springs was burned at sea when a leak developed that made it impossible to reach port. The crew was saved.

U. S. JUDGE IS ACCUSED IN B. & M. CASE

New Jersey, through an arrangement with the road, and was a friendly proceeding.

Attorney Asa P. French, who, acting for Francis V. Streeter of Medford, forced Judge Putnam from the bench, charged that this arrangement involved collusion and breach of duty on the part of the directors.

DECLARES CHARGES FALSE.

Judge Putnam, after ordering the appointment of a receiver, further directed that the charges against himself and against the directors be referred to the Grand Jury. He declared the charges were false.

The dramatic scene in court was precipitated when Attorney French offered an affidavit from Francis V. Streeter. By the court's direction, the clerk refused to receive this affidavit, Attorney French said.

"In the interest of the minority stockholders, this affidavit ought to be filed. In view of the collusion and breach of duty of the directors, I ought to be allowed to do this."

Judge Putnam rejoined: "If you charge collusion and breach of trust, I may want to investigate; but I will hear nothing on an intervention by the minority stockholders now."

Attorney French pressed his point and eventually Judge Putnam allowed the attorney to read the affidavit. It read as follows:

STREETER'S AFFIDAVIT.

Francis V. Streeter of Medford in said district, on oath, deposes and says that he is a stockholder of said defendant corporation, and, as a petitioner to intervene, is a party to the proceedings begun by the filing of the bill of complaint; that the principal and basic issue of fact in controversy under the pleadings thus far filed in said cause involves the integrity and fidelity to their trust of a majority of the board of directors of said defendant, and whether or not they have improperly and unlawfully connived and conspired with the complainant in violation of their duty to the stockholders in an attempt to force a receivership upon the defendant; that while this affiant shares the confidence of the public generally in the integrity, learning and impartiality of the Honorable William E. Putnam, Circuit Judge of the United States for the First Circuit, before whom said proceeding has been assigned to be heard, he is informed and believes that the personal relations of Judge Putnam with the directors, or some of them, are a close and friendly; that he cannot help entertaining and does in fact entertain a personal bias in favor of said directors and a correspondingly prejudice against the contention of this affiant and his associate minority stockholders; and this affiant further deposes and says that he has not made and filed this affidavit earlier for the reason that the information upon which it is based has not to the first time been brought to his attention.

WITHDRAWS FROM CASE.

When Attorney French had read the affidavit, Judge Putnam said:

"You may bring those matters before the Grand Jury if you like; but I am not going to sit here and have my personal character attacked. If you file this affidavit, I will withdraw from the case."

Attorney French asked time to confer with his clients and his associate, Conrad W. Crooker. After a five-minutes' conference, he arose and said gravely:

"No words I ever uttered in my life give me more regret than the words I am about to utter. But I will leave the affidavit on file with the court. It is an affidavit of bias, under the judiciary act, and in filing it I mean no attack on the court's integrity and honor."

Judge Putnam said sharply: "Mr. Clerk, you may send the papers to the district attorney."

"Your Honor," Attorney French broke in, "it often happens that the relations of a judge with the parties to a suit are such that he may not care to hear a case.

"I defy any one in this Commonwealth to criticise my character," Judge Putnam replied. "I bear the same relations to Mr. Cook and his father (Mr. Cook is a director in the road), that I do to you and your father. The affidavit is absolutely without justification. If before you file the affidavit and papers I will withdraw from the case."

Attorney French represented stockholders opposing the receivership. Attorney Boyd B. Jones represented the company, which asked the appointment of a receiver. Attorney Jones said now:

"I say Your Honor cannot deprive us of our rights on such a flimsy, unworthy pretext as this."

"It is only under a stern sense of duty that I do this," said Attorney French. "No one has greater confidence in your integrity than I."

Judge Putnam replied: "Then a stern sense of duty requires you to bring down a slab on the heads of your clients to brush away a fly."

Attorney French said: "This is no criticism of Your Honor. Unfortunately, some of the directors have clandestinely arranged with this rubber company to put the railroad into the hands of a receiver, to coerce the stockholders to consent to an unfair arrangement."

JAMES HUSTIS RECEIVER.

Judge Putnam turned to the clerk. "Mr. Clerk," he said, "enter an order granting the appointment of an interlocutory receiver. Also an order that the court does not propose to sit with these papers on file, and that the papers be sent to the District Attorney and the Grand Jury.

"I am glad to get rid of the case. I know some lawyers who would not stand up in court and go back on their oath."

He then rose briskly, while the spectators sat astonished, and retired to his chambers. Two minutes later he sent out word that he had named President Hustis temporary receiver."

C. W. Crooker, associate of Mr. French as counsel for the minority stockholders, later sent to President Hustis a petition, bearing the names of owners of 15,000 shares of stock, urging that a special meeting of all stockholders be called immediately to take up the receivership matter.

According to the by-laws of the road such a meeting can be called when owners of 5,000 shares request.

The Miracle of Modern Magazines

Teeming with Stories by the Masters of Modern Fiction Embroidered with the Creative Art of Great Illustrators Discriminating and Correct in its Portrayal of Fashions a Tennysonian Brook of Information on Economics of the Home

To-day, we present to the Women of America, the first issue of the new, big Good Housekeeping, a magazine so very much bigger and more beautiful than any publication you have ever seen that it will give you a new and greatly larger conception of the richness, in illustration and in text, that can be put into a 15c Magazine.

By enlarging Good Housekeeping to a handier, more usable shape—

By exercising an even more uncompromising censorship over its contents—

By recruiting its authors and its artists from the foremost ranks of contemporary fame—

By adventuring into new fields of feminine interest and broadening the scope of its editorial appeal—by shedding the light of discovery and suggestion into the profession of managing a home—

By contributing to the happiness of life and mitigating the hardships of living—by taking life earnestly, eagerly, but not too seriously—

By lengthening its pages and strengthening its purpose—and by a score and one embellishments, present and yet to come—

We have made Good Housekeeping the finest woman's magazine extant.

We have made it bigger, broader, better, brighter, and infinitely more beautiful, richer alike in the volume, the variety, the virility and the value of its contents.

We have signalized the change in size by such lavish expenditures for stories, pictures, and fashions as to make this new September Good Housekeeping a thing of infinite beauty and charm—a joy to the eye—an invitation to the soul—a guide in your home—an authority on your clothes—and the only magazine in America to-day for which there is no alternative.

We have simply edited on the theory that nothing is too good for American Womanhood and that most things are not good enough.

Stories, Pictures, Fashions, Humor, Poetry and Home Economics, each and all are contributed by Master Minds.

BY DOCTOR'S ORDER

Physician Advises Mother to Give Father John's Medicine to Her Children

"I have given my children Father John's Medicine when they are not feeling well and never have to worry as the medicine always does great work. One of my children was sick and the doctor ordered one, which I was giving the little girl and I said 'Father John's Medicine.' 'Give her all she can take,' was his advice. She is now feeling better than ever. It is a wonderful medicine." (Signed) Mrs. Thompson, 2 St. Alphonsus Ave., Roxbury, Mass.

As a tonic and body builder, Father John's Medicine has had more than 60 years of success. It is pure and wholesome nourishment for those who are weak and run down. Contains no alcohol or dangerous drugs, but it is a doctor's prescription more than 60 years in use.—Advertisement.

CLEAR MYSTERY OF DANVERS AUTOMOBILE

The mystery of an overturned automobile found off Newbury street, in Danvers, with a woman's hat and bloodstained garments near it, was cleared up today.

In the night a man, giving his name as Robert Handley of Long Island, telephoned the Danvers police that the car belonged to him, but he gave no details. Today the Danvers officers said that they had learned that Mr. Handley, his wife, two daughters, a young man friend and the chauffeur were in the car when the accident occurred.

Mr. Handley and his family were returning from Maine. As they were running along Newbury street in Danvers the chauffeur, Albert Kirt, put the brakes on suddenly to avoid a car ahead. The Handley machine skidded on an oil spot and went over a banking into the William Endicott estate, crashing through a fence and tipping over.

Boy Killed by 5-Ton Stone.

Manchester, N. H., Aug. 29.—James Alexander was crushed to death under a five-ton block of granite which slipped in its hoisting gear at South Manchester Grammar School today.

Peabody Man Is Held on Charge of Killing Wife

Daniel Mandzu begged Judge Fay in Peabody district court today, after he had been held for the Essex Grand Jury on a charge of murdering his wife Josephine, to be allowed to go to his wife's body and pray for her. The plea was denied. Being held without bail, Mandzu was sent to Salem jail to await the Grand Jury action.

Mr. and Mrs. Mandzu had lived apart some years. She kept a lodging house on English street in Peabody. Mandzu, according to the police, was jealous of his wife and had lodged several complaints against her and one of her lodgers.

One of the lodgers heard shots in the upper part of the house, ran to the stairway and, the police say, met Mandzu hurrying down. The husband brandished a revolver, scared the lodger away and escaped. Then the lodger rushed upstairs and found Mrs. Mandzu dead in a chair. Examination showed three bullets in the woman's brain.

Later the husband was arrested by Police Chief Grady of Peabody on the road to Beverly Farms. He had no weapon and offered no resistance.

Child Killed by Hot Ashes.

Marlboro, Aug. 29.—Alfred Celino, eighteen months old, of No. 4 Clinton court, died today at the local hospital from burns received Sunday while playing about a pile of hot ashes.

FEAR EFFECT OF STRIKES ON ELECTION

By International News Service.

Washington, Aug. 29.—With several of the so-called pivotal States already in the throes of industrial disturbances, political leaders today did not conceal their alarm over the possible effect on the political situation of legislation designed to avert the impending railroad strike.

Vance McCormick, chairman of the Democratic national committee, before his return to New York today, found numerous Senators and Congressmen plainly perturbed over reports gathered by administration experts disclosing the fact that 200,000 workers in union trades are on strike today, either for more wages or shorter hours, and a large majority of these are voters in doubtful sections.

Results of the canvass made by Secretary of Labor Wilson's agents show the metal, building and other industries in districts centring in New York, Ohio, New Jersey, Connecticut and Massachusetts are out on strike.

Latest figures reveal that not less than 200,000 additional persons were indirectly involved, in addition to those who have thrown down their tools.

Conciliators of the Department of Labor have interceded in forty disputes involving 75,000 workers.

Tailor Fined $50 for Lining Coat With U. S. Flag

Perkus Brown, a tailor with a shop at No. 161 West Broadway, South Boston, and his helper, Jacob Diner, were brought into the South Boston court today and charged with misusing the flag of the United States.

George S. Parks of No. 221 Gold street testified that, in passing the tailor shop on August 24, he saw Diner using the flag to make the lining for a woman's fur coat.

Diner testified that he was told to do so by Brown, and Brown said he did it with no thought of harm. "I didn't know it was against the law," he said. "I didn't do it to insult the flag. I did it to make the coat look nice."

Brown was fined fifty dollars, and the case against Diner was filed.

SEEKS TOWN STUDY OF TUBERCULOSIS

Dr. D. E. Armstrong of New York today began a hunt for a Massachusetts town of 10,000 people willing to undergo a scientific test to stamp out tuberculosis. He represents the National Association for the Study of Prevention of Tuberculosis, which was recently given a fund of $100,000 by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company to study community tuberculosis.

Dr. Armstrong went out to look over Norwood, under escort of an official from the State Health Department.

SUFFRAGE HATS FOR WOMEN IN NEW STYLES

Suffrage hats for women. Rumanian helmet hats, together with the popular Tam and the Henet hats, are the coming styles in feminine head-gear exhibited today at the New England Retail Milliners' Association, which opened a two-day session in Ford Hall.

Bandeau effects will be a feature for the coming season and the "droop" style will make any woman beautiful, experts contend. It is designed for women who have trouble in selection of their hats.

The newest purple is a very strong color, according to J. W. Crowley, one of the hat experts of Boston, who is attending the convention.

"The political or suffrage hat for women is a grand display of history," he added. "When a woman wants to put history in the trimmings of her hat this is her opportunity. Some call this style the National Suffrage Hat. It has upon its crown thirteen stripes, representing the thirteen original States. The stars symbolize by different shades the States which have suffrage and those which do not have it.

"The white stars represent States which have no woman suffrage, white with black stars represent States which have equal suffrage."

Ora Cre will show tomorrow new hat frames and how to trim them. There will be also a demonstration of the use of fur bands. Miss Grace Culbert will give tomorrow evening the "fairy doll dance," followed by an address from Miss Sarah M. Wheeler, president of the Business Women's Club.

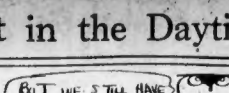
BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS



CAMPFIRE BIG RACE CHOICE

Wilson Colt Best Liked in Field of Fifteen in Futurity at Belmont Saturday.

New York, Aug. 29.—Fifteen of the speediest two-year-old horses in America are entered in the Futurity which will be run next Saturday over the famous Belmont course.

The classic probably will be worth close to $25,000 to the winner, a big stake, yet one that is small in comparison with what this annual event paid in earlier years. In 1888, when the race first was inaugurated, the purse was the then unheard-of sum of $45,000. It was won by a dark outsider, Proctor Knott, the unsexed son of Luke Blackburn. The gelding cost his owner, Sam Bryant, only $400, yet he romped in ahead of the great Salvator and a field of the fastest horses of that era.

The biggest amount the Futurity ever paid was $77,000 in 1906. It went to August Belmont's horse Potomac. Harry Payne Whitney's colt Thunderer was in the Futurity running last year, the purse being $16,500.

WEIGHT NO BOTHER.

The favorite in Saturday's Futurity probably will be the sensational Campfire, owned by Richard T. Wilson. The colt must carry a big bunch of lead, but imposts do not seem to bother him. He packed 120 pounds in the Hopeful Handicap at Saratoga last Saturday, met a field of crack performers—and won with ease.

But it isn't going to be a cinch for Campfire. He will have opposition of the fiercest kind. Practically every one of the other fourteen entries is a real race horse. Each has a chance to slip home ahead. The Whitney family has entered four horses—Rickety, Bellringer, Hard Cash and Vivid—of the star brood. August Belmont's crack, Beer Trap, also is conceded a look in. Among the other entries are Ivory Tack (James Butler); Star Master (A. K. Macomber); The Knocker (Aneck Stable); Thistle (Aneck Stable); Burlesque (Clifford Cochrane); Maderia (Clifford Cochrane) Ticket (Andrew Miller); America (Thomas C. McDowell); Star Fifth (Sunset Stables.)

POLICEMAN SHOOTS AND KILLS IN RAID

Attleboro, Aug. 29.—John Brown, twenty-five, of Pawtucket, R. I., died at the Sturdy Memorial Hospital in this city today as the result of being shot by Clarence Flanagan, an Attleboro policeman, last night. The shooting followed a raid by Flanagan on a small shanty near the Attleboro-Pawtucket line, where it is alleged a crap game was in progress.

Millionaire Boss of Browns Here with His Club

Otto Stifel, the multi-millionaire St. Louis brewer and noted Republican politician, owner of the baseball Browns, here for four games in three days with the Red Sox, is in Boston with his ball club. Mr. Stifel was one of the organizers of the Federal League. He went the limit for the "outlaw" organization, and when it went up the spout and the baseball market was readjusted, purchased with Phil Ball, as a partner, the Browns from Robert L. Hedges.

Mr. Stifel is the man who brought Fielder Jones out of retirement. The wealthy St. Louisan was greatly interested on the running turf, Colonial Girl, one of his old star racers, defeated Burgomaster in the $50,000 handicap, World's Fair year in St. Louis.

With Mr. Stifel in Boston this trip is William Fritsch, one of the club's stockholders and a man who has done yeoman service in making the Missouri Athletic Club one of the foremost institutions of its kind in the country. Newspapermen in the St. Louis party are J. R. Sheridan, Globe-Democrat; "Bill" Coelling, Republic; William J. O'Connor, Post-Dispatch, and Clarence Lloyd, Star.

Fall Meeting at Belmont Park Opens Today

New York, Aug. 29.—Belmont Park will open its gates this afternoon for a twelve-day meeting, the last of the thoroughbred racing season in this State this year.

An unusually attractive program is offered at the Nassau County course, the feature of the opening day being for those who were not fortunate enough to attend the meeting at Saratoga Springs and have been eagerly watching for the return of the sport, however short its duration.

The Belmont Park Autumn Handicap, at a mile and a furlong, will be the feature of the card, although the field is a small one, it is none the less select.

August Belmont's Stromboli, Short Grass, the Irish horse, which ran an amazing race at Saratoga this season. Capra and Frizzle are the ones named overnight.

In another race, one for two-year-olds, a number of juveniles that have been showing up well this season, Capra and Frizzle are the ones named overnight.

In another race, one for two-year-olds, a number of juveniles that have been showing up well this season, have won brackets, will attract no little attention.

RED SOX

Boston. There were about 10,000 present at the start of the first game.

SAVE TWO CHILDREN AT WEYMOUTH BLAZE

Awakened to find their house filled with smoke, Mr. and Mrs. John Nicholson of Canterbury street, East Weymouth, snatched their two young children from bed and carried them from the house to safety. When they reached the street it was discovered that a fire had started in a barn attached to the house. Damage is placed by the firemen at $1,000. It is thought that the fire was set.

ASTOR'S SON WEDS LADY NAIRNE

London, Aug. 29.—Captain John Astor of the First Life Guards was married to Lady Charles Mercer Nairne at Christ Church.

Captain Astor is the youngest son of Baron Astor of Hever Castle (William Waldorf Astor, formerly of New York). The bride is the widow of Lord Nairne, second son of the Marquis of Lansdowne, who was killed early in the war in France.

Hon. Heinie Goes to Giants; Cubs Get Larry Doyle

CHICAGO, Aug. 29. — The oft-talked-of Heinie Zimmerman trade has finally been consummated.

Heinie has been traded to the Giants and will join McGraw's men in Cincinnati today. In return the Cubs get Larry Doyle, the veteran second baseman; Jacobson, a recruit outfielder, and Hunter, an infielder of promise.

President Weeghman announced the deal last night following a long-distance telephone conversation with McGraw, in which the details of the trade were completed.

BRAVES ARE SATISFIED.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 29.—Manager Stallings of the Braves is satisfied to see Zimmerman go to the Giants. He all but withdrew his offer for the temperamental slugger before leaving Chicago Sunday night, being satisfied he has a winner and not anxious to break up a winning combination.

If Hon. Heinie had landed with Brooklyn or Philadelphia the Braves would fear the outcome of the race. Now that McGraw has secured him joy reigns supreme in the Stallings party.

Gotham Fans Not Enthused by Deal for Zim

New York, Aug. 29.—Gotham fans aren't showing any wild enthusiasm over the deal that brought Heinie Zimmerman to the club as a sacrifice for Larry Doyle and two "rookies." Doyle was something of a hero here, his hard working and earnest style of play, he made a hit with the fans. But they aren't sure whether Zim with his temperament is going to be a great asset. They concede him marvelous baseball ability, but they wonder if he will curb his tongue and his fire sufficiently to keep him in the game as a regular.

WOONSOCKET MEET RINGS UP TOMORROW

Beginning tomorrow there will be five days of sport for the trotters and pacers at the Woonsocket, R. I., track. The Short Ship Circuit has finished its season's program, and this meeting will be held under the auspices of the Woonsocket Fair Association.

Well-known owners who have made a practice of racing throughout New England during the Fall have entered in liberal manner, and as some of those six and eight-time winners have hit for other climes the racing should be particularly keen.

Wollaston Boys in Caddy Title Tournament

At the Wollaston G. C., Montclair, today, the first round of match play in two divisions will be played in the caddies' annual tournament. Yesterday a youth by the name of George Callahan, who spends a great deal of his time in the forenoon in playing a round of golf over these links, spared a 78 for his round. This score gave him the medal for best round and this forenoon he meets Sidney Baker.

Philip Barry, who finished runner-up to F. J. Wright, Jr., in the State junior championship tournament at Woodland this year, has for an opponent Charles Nelson. Barry appears on paper to be about the best caddie at Wollaston, and should be able to win the tournament this year.

The gradings for match play, eight qualifying for the championship and sixteen for the second division follow:

CHAMPIONSHIP DIVISION.

P. Barry vs. C. Nelson, C. Callahan vs. S. Baker, J. Kinneburgh vs. J. Orr, F. Hayes vs. W. Lewis.

SECOND DIVISION.

G. Dineen vs. D. Scully, A. Baker vs. J. Collins, R. Barry vs. W. Cody, G. Albach vs. M. Joe, R. Dwiery vs. F. Hanno, J. Mayberry vs. W. Whalen, J. Le Blanc vs. W. Murphy, Burgess vs. F. Coty.

SMITH IS TO PLAY TODAY

Pittsburgh, Aug. 29.—"Red" Smith, the Braves' third baseman, who had the thumb on his right hand slightly injured early in the second game yesterday, reports the member as O. K., and gave it out this morning that he was confident he would be able to play in both games today.

BOB GARDNER DISABLED

Chicago, Aug. 29.—Robert A. Gardner of Hinsdale may not defend his title as amateur golf champion in the National meet at Philadelphia next week, because of an infected finger.

Must Slice to 35 by Sept. 15 or Cannot Draft

Cincinnati, Aug. 29.—The National Commission has served notice on all major league clubs that all clubs whose roster includes thirty-five or more players September 15, will not be permitted to file a draft for this season.

The announcement also reminds the clubs that the major league drafting season begins September 15 and closes September 20. The hour and place of the commission's meeting for the opening and awarding of selections of players through the draft will be announced later.

It also was learned semi-officially that the meeting would be an open one and the drafts announced publicly. This will be the first time in the last three seasons this has been done. During the last two years of the Federal League the drafts were kept secret until the player had signed a contract.

McLoughlin Vanquishes McLave, Cornell Crack, in Come-Back Match at Forest Hills.

Forest Hills, L. I., Aug. 29.—Maurice Evans McLoughlin, the California Comet, came back to the scene of his greatest tennis triumphs, and back, too, in the sporting sense of the term.

He may not regain the title which he lost to Richard Norris Williams, 2nd, two years ago—and he may—but he certainly got off to a start which suggested to quite a few that he will.

In the first round of the national championship singles at the West Side Tennis Club, McLoughlin defeated R. B. McLave of Cornell in a match which, in its closing stages, was reminiscent of the Comet at his best. He won in straight sets, with the loss of only three games.

William M. Johnston, the present holder of the title, was also a victor in straight sets, and so was Clarence James Griffin, his doubles partner.

Ward Dawson, McLoughlin's team mate, alone of the Californians, went down to defeat. He lost to Eli H. Whitney, 6—2, 6—3, 6—1. Johnston won from Howard Notman, 6—0, 6—1, 6—3, while Griffin scored over Fred C. Jarvis, 8—6, 6—0, 6—2.

These were the only matches played. The rain early in the morning necessitated a wholesale postponement, and for a time it was thought the entire schedule would go over a day.

Callahan Rules Choice

By RINGSIDE.

According to everything that comes under the head of dope, past performances, current form and opinions of the wise-cracking brigade, Harry Carlson, the Brockton broiler, who goes on with Frankie Callahan, the accomplished Brooklyn lightweight, in the main melee at the Arena tonight, looms up as the best 133-pound gloveman of New England.

Carlson closed a successful march up the line by outstepping, outpunching and out-maneuvering Matty Baldwin, who for upwards of ten years ruled this section's premier lightweight, in the Commercial A. C. ring Friday night a week ago. It's a snap for Carlson to make 135 pounds; in fact, providing George Freeman, his manager, has not been "kidding" all along, Harry has never scaled that heavy.

In Callahan, Carlson is meeting far and away the stiffest battler he has yet been set against. Dan McKetrick's charge has just got through putting old Ad Wolgast, the once-upon-a-time Michigan Reading and lightweight premier, to rout.

That is really no difficult feat, considering how Wolgast has backed up, and that the Michigander never amounted to much in a limited round contest, even in his palmy days.

Still, all the New York critics gave Callahan full credit with having put up a corking good all-round battle against Wolgast. He not only made all the pace, and had quite a pudgy in his favor at the end, but had Ad on the verge of going down and staying down at one stage of their encounter.

Callahan has likewise had good fortune against some of the other high-steppers in the interesting 135-pound division. He gave Charley White eight quite peppery rounds at St. Louis. During the Summer he wasn't shaded very badly by Vic Moran, the little New Orleans battler, who made such a good impression in his bout with Frankie Mack at the Arena last week; in fact, a couple of the Gotham critics called their set-to an even thing.

Baldwin in the only out-and-out star Carlson has met and the Baldwin the Brockton boy boxed the other night was nothing like the Baldwin of yore. Harry is a deft little boxer. He doesn't seem to possess much of a "kick" in his punches, but truth is to that Baldwin, as well as Howard McHas, who he met previous to his battle with ol' Matty, were well marked up at the close of their combats.

The talent has installed Callahan the betting choice over Carlson. That is only proper. Still, should Carlson come on and win out the Armory A. A. members turning out for the fracas will be a happy lot.

The boxing fans are yearning to have a home product go over, and the field of promising prospects is limited; in fact, it is practically closed when Carlson and Young Britt are enumerated.

The semi-final number should please. Johnny Donovan is out to get even with Charley Shepard for the unexpected one he tossed off to that youth a fortnight ago. Should Donovan fail to win, it's a sure thing he isn't going to prove the expert phenom, per his early promise.

Pat Owens and Louis Leonard and Young Buckley and Johnny Leo are the boys programmed to appear in the two SIX-rounders.

PHYSICIAN GIVES THE TRUE VERSION

Stricken with Sciatic Rheumatism and Helpless, States Plant Juice Cured Him.

The principal reason that the fame of Plant Juice has spread like wildfire throughout the country is because everyone that tested it or has seen what it will do has a good word for it, and never misses an opportunity to speak of it," said the Plant Juice Man, who has his headquarters at the Druggist Department of the Houghton & Dutton Co.'s store. "The history of Plant Juice, the way in which the manufacturer made it, and the great events that have followed, have been the subject of numerous newspaper articles throughout America," continued the Plant Juice Man. "The story is an interesting one and I always like to tell it, but here is something new to the point: Plant Juice is now being introduced in the State of Massachusetts, and has already established a firm hold in Boston, where it is reviving and revitalizing people in all walks of life. That this contention is true it is only necessary to listen to the statements of well known people who have given Plant Juice a trial and have been benefited thereby, as for instances the signed testimonial of Dr. J. M. Ernest, who has been a practicing physician for the past forty-two years, being a graduate of the Long Island Medical College in 1875. He resides at Alliance, Ohio, and is one of the best known practitioners in the State. He said:

"For the past five week I have been unable to walk, and was confined to my bed with sciatic rheumatism. I lost my appetite and food was very distasteful to me. I was nervous, could not sleep at night, and was run down in general. After taking one bottle of Plant Juice my pains have disappeared, and I am now cured. I want to talk Plant Juice to all of my friends, who will no doubt think it strange coming from a practicing physician, but I feel that I owe your medicine this public endorsement. Such words as these and those of many others which have been printed have a wide influence, for they come from men of standing and integrity, who have given Plant Juice a fair trial and have been benefited thereby. —Advertisement.

McLoughlin Star of Yore Comet Shows Up Critics

By International News Service.

FOREST HILLS, L. I., Aug. 29.—It was Maurice McLoughlin, the Comet, of yore; no sorry "has-been," as had been pictured by some tennis critics. In his Metropolitan come-back, playing against R. B. McLave, the Cornell crack, McLoughlin had an easy time.

The Comet played well within his reserve, but in the last game of the last set gave an exhibition suggestive of the McLoughlin who beat Anthony Wilding and Norman Brookes back in the last Davis Cup series.

Only twice during the match did the Comet bring into play his terrific overhead smash. He did this in the final game of the contest. High into the air he leaped, brought his racket down upon the ball with tremendous force, while off the ground, and the point was over. McLave scurried out of the way of the ball. He could not return it. No one could.

McLave was excellent practice for the Comet and the Comet took advantage of him. He stroked the ball throughout and satisfied the gallery he is in excellent form.

Up to yesterday McLoughlin's status had been more or less of a mystery. From now on he will have to be reckoned with. A more definite idea of his chances of winning the title will be had Thursday when he meets the winner of the George Myers Church-Ichiya Kumagae match.

Gallagher Hero of Ninth's Tidy Diamond Win

By BERT FORD.

Camp Pershing, El Paso, Tex., Aug. 29.—The Ninth Regiment won its first game in the Army Border League championship series, defeating the Eighth Cavalry, 10-2. The fielding of Mounted Orderly "Fish" Gallagher of the ninth was the feature. Gallashee caught two long drives that looked like ours homers. Holden pitched and Quirk caught for Colonel Logan's team.

The Ninth has only been defeated once and that in its first game against seasoned regulars, the Twenty-third Infantry, before the Boston players had become acclimated, or had uniforms.

The Massachusetts Field Artillery walloped the Twenty-third Infantry, 24-2. Both were five-inning games. In the third inning the Bay State artillerymen had twenty-one men at bat and made seventeen runs with eleven hits and five errors.

Up to date the field artillery and Ninth look like the leaders. The Ninth has defeated the Artillery once and was a run ahead in the second game, which was interrupted by a storm. That game is to be played off next Sunday. The games between the Ninth and Artillery were not league games.

BOB MOHA HAS SNAP IN GO WITH JOE COX

New York, Aug. 29.—Bob Moha, the Milwaukee Caveman, battered Joe Cox, the Missouri Giant, around at will in their ten-round bout at the Manhattan A. C. Moha weighed forty-one pounds less than his opponent, but this made no noticeable difference, except to make Moha's victory that much more telling.

It was one more vision dissipated, for Cox failed to live up to what everyone has heard about—his prowess in stopping Jess Willard once upon a time, in a few rounds.

LAST NIGHT IN THE RING.

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 29.—Frankie Reed, the New York lightweight, easily outpointed "Kid" Wolf of Cleveland, in an event at the Flower City A. C. All the way, Brown's manager, claims his charge will beat "Kid" Williams in Baltimore Labor Day.

Gloucester, Aug. 29.—Karl Hess of Washington, so far outclassed Young Jasper of Boston at the Lenox A. C., that the latter quit at the end of the fifth round. Tommy Corbett stopped Simon O'Toole in two rounds, and Eddie Burns took care of Young Thomas in the same distance.

Philadelphia, Aug. 29.—At the Olympic A. C. Sam Robinson defeated Willie Moore in six rounds and Joe O'Donnell stopped Johnny Maloney in the fourth round.

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 29.—"Kid" Williams, the Baltimore featherweight, made Young Zarelo suffer the first defeat of his career, being outpointed ten-round bout.

New York, Aug. 30.—Jim Healy, the Kerry Dancer, made it nine straight knockouts by finishing Jack McGinn in the first round at the Olympic A. C.

Yankee Team in Hard Battle at Revere Track

A fifty-mile motor-paced race between the American team of Wiley and Carman and the French-Italian doublet of Seres and Madonna will be the main attraction at the Revere cycle track tomorrow night.

Team races, introduced this season for the first time, have scored a decided hit at the beach oval. Practically every one of them have gone big, and in nearly all of them the Yankee combination of Wiley and Carman have figured prominently.

But tomorrow night Wiley and Carman face a new combination, quite the fastest thing at the beach. Madonna has yet to be beaten here this season, while Seres' wins far outnumber the losses; in fact, the little Frenchman has proven himself the most consistent worker of the year.

Combined Madonna and Seres loom up as a corking good team. Weather permitting, they will get together today for a little practice in order to "wise" up to each other's style, clean "pickups" count a whole lot in team racing, and that is why the Italian-French pair are anxious to work out before the race.

RAIN AT POUGHKEEPSIE.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Aug. 29.—A heavy rain caused a postponement of the opening program of the Grand Circuit meeting at Hudson River Driving Park. The 2:18 trot will be added to the regular first day card and it is the intention to race the five-day program off in four days.

CHANEY WORKING TO INCREASE SPEED

Cleveland, Aug. 29.—George Chaney, Baltimore featherweight, today took up a series of training stunts that are intended to increase his speed. He rested yesterday, when it was found that he was so near the required weight that further strenuous work would be unnecessary. Kilbane weighed 122¾ pounds today and he, too, will let up gradually from now on.

Tulsa to Decide If Big Fellows Are to Meet

Oklahoma City, Okla., Aug. 29.—The question of permitting the Carl Morris-Frank Moran fight at Tulsa on Labor Day has been left to the officials of Tulsa County by Lieutenant-Governor Trapp, who in the absence of Governor Williams is acting Governor.

Replying to a telegram from the sheriff of Tulsa County for an expression of his attitude on the proposed "boxing contest," the Lieutenant-Governor said:

"I have confidence in the officers of Tulsa city and county, and assume that the laws will be enforced."

SEIZE HIM, MEN!

If I were but a gunman
And had my gat in hand
I know, at least, that one man
Would see the Promised Land.

You, too, perchance, have seen him

And dearly yearned to bean him
Or bust him on the eye.

He flits you with vexation,
The pestiful person who
Is back from his vacation
And tells it all to you.

You get the vacation stuff coming and going, pro and con, and likewise hither and whence. The guy who has returned from his vacation is no worse than the self-made gent who slaps himself on the chest and says: "Look at me! I ain't had a vacation since I was a kid going to school."

Baseball is a queer game. Deacon Johnston stopped a pitched ball with his nostrils while Rollie Zeider's mammoth proboscis retains all its pristine beauty.

Being a student of inside baseball, we cannot understand why Mack doesn't sign Larry McLean.

White-Welsh Go an Even Money Proposition

Colorado Springs, Col., Aug. 29.—Sporting men on the ground here prophesied today that Freddie Welsh and Charley White will step into the ring for their twenty-round mill Labor Day at even money. So far there has been little money in appearance here and that went up on a fifty-fifty basis. Two to one are offered that the Chicago chap does not knock out the champion.

Both men were in excellent shape today and ready if need be to step into the ring and go twenty rounds. White is hammering his sparring partners into snapelessness. Welsh is boxing fast, but is taking every precaution to guard his hands.

The only guy that isn't dragging reg'lar on these grand good smokes today is the canny gent that's savin' 'em up fer Sunday.

"BEATRICE FAIRFAX"

Novelized From the Great Film Play
By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

By Beatrice Fairfax
(Novelized from the Scenario of Basil Dickey and produced in motion pictures by Wharton, Inc., Studios for the International Film Service)

WHEN Mimosa San spoke of the Spanish lady who had come to the Tea Garden and had stolen away Haku Satsu's fickle attentions, Jimmy, the blase, became Jimmy, the alert. It was not until several hours afterward that I knew clearly just what train of thought the little Japanese girl had started in his reportorial mind.

But in order that the tale of the Nippon Tea Garden may be clear to you, I shall tell the reason for Jimmy's interest now. That morning the city editor, Howard Barnes, had assigned to Jimmy an interview with John Brayton, inventor of the Brayton rifle sight.

A card with "New York Evening Journal" in one corner admits one to almost sacred presences. Jimmy may not have been welcome in the Brayton home, but at least he penetrated its fastnesses.

At the end of his visit with Brayton he got nothing more than a promise that the inventor would give him an interview when his plans were in the government vault the next day. Mr. Barton wasn't in the habit of returning to Mr. Barnes with excuses and promises for "mananа."

And so he determined on a second effort. Back in the Journal he came, made his arrangements to take me to the Nippon Tea Garden, and then right-about-faced and returned over the road to the Brayton home.

Later we both blessed the fates which had made Jimmy, the modern, buy a "little old car" instead of trusting to subways, as do all old-school reporters—and also less did we bless the fates which made Jimmy, the modern, also Jimmy, the stubborn!

Jimmy Lets the Car Pass

Jimmy's little car traveled at a leisurely rate out of deference to its age—and when he saw a big, high-powered limousine tearing down the road at terrific speed he drew off to the side of the road conservatively and gave place to the reckless machine which looked as if it could howl over his little car at one swoop.

Philosophically he shrugged his shoulders and determined that if he and his friend, Miss Fairfax, got a few more exclusive stories he would own a car that didn't have to give way to all the speed-maniacs in Westchester County.

About half an hour later Mr. Barton reached the Brayton home. Up to the door went the intrepid knight of newspaperdom, who half-expected to have it slammed in his face almost as soon as it was opened. He rang the bell vigorously, then impatiently.

At last it was opened by a wild-eyed maid, who did not look like even the half-sister of the tidy young person who had admitted him in the morning. And a moment later Brayton was telling Jimmy a story which filled them both with mingled emotions of anger, chagrin and terror.

"Less than twenty minutes before you came, Barton," said the inventor, "there was an accident on the road just outside my house. A wheel came off a big car that was passing by, and a woman was hurt.

"Her chauffeur shouted for help and I went to give it; of course, why not? You see that, don't you? I had just been addressing an envelope to Brigadier-General Haynes of the War Department at Washington.

"The blue-prints for my rifle sight were inside it. I left them on the table when I went out to rescue the woman. She might have been hurt—dangerously hurt. I had to go. You see that, don't you, Barton? You don't think I'm to blame?"

Brayton Goes On

"For the love of heaven, man, go on, hurry, 'pronto!' We are wasting time. If anything serious has happened, I'll only blame you if you don't get on."

"I'm getting on—I'm getting on," said the inventor, struggling to turn a dreamer into a man of action in a few sentences. "Well, I helped the driver carry the woman into the house; she was badly bruised, unconscious. And then a moment later, after the maid had helped us lay her on the couch and had gone to get a basin of water, I leaned over to reassure myself. She might have been dead, you know. Then something struck me sharply. It was here, I think—I still feel a little pain.

Mimosa San, following her sweetheart, Haku Satsu, sees him in the company of a Spanish woman and becomes greatly perturbed.

"Jiu-jitsu," exclaimed Jimmy. "Was the man a Jap?"

"Oh, I didn't notice. He seemed an ordinary enough young chap—you couldn't see much of him. A long coat and goggles covered him pretty thoroughly. Just a few minutes before you rang the door bell I became conscious again, but I had a pretty bad time of it managing to get up and untie the maid. They had her all strapped and helpless. A curtain cord they used, I think. I am not quite steady on my feet yet."

"But the envelopes—the blue-prints. Are they here?" asked Jimmy.

"No. They got away with them—that's the bother of it."

Then Jimmy remembered the car he had passed on the road, the big speed-demon. He had obtained but a glimpse of the driver and the woman in the tonneau. But the glimpse had sufficed. It had registered on Mr. Barton's brain.

"That's more than 'the bother of it,' Mr. Brayton," said he. "There's the deuce to pay. The man was a Jap. The woman looked Spanish; some of the Hidalgos have never been reconstructed since Manila Bay."

"Come on, man," cried the inventor, with a sudden influx of violent energy. "We are wasting time. We must follow them at once in your car."

Jimmy thought of the big speed-demon, and smiled grimly. "Too late. They're in New York by now."

And then Mr. Barton hurried to the phone and called Beekman 2000. Howard Barnes answered the telephone.

Jimmy's conversation meant an extra for the Journal and information that would put the police of New York on the trail of two dangerous spies.

The headline of the extra read:

INVENTOR'S PLANS STOLEN
Brayton Rifle Sight in the Hands of Spies.

It is not particularly surprising, is it, that Mr. Barton so suddenly ceased fuming and fretting at his enforced inaction, when Mimosa San breathed that little sentence which told how the Spanish lady made secret signs to Haku? The vision which that story conjured up in his mind fitted in marvellously well with what seemed to Jimmy far more than just a girl's love tale.

An Affair of Moment

This was an affair of nations—the Brayton rifle sight was in the hands of a Jap; that Jap had betrayed a rather startling interest in a Spanish woman. And it was a Spanish woman and a Jap who had stolen the plans from Brayton's home. Of so much Sherlock Holmes Barton was reasonably and sadly sure. But was there any hope that this knowledge would avail him anything?

A pretty little waitress approached our table. "Excuse, Mimosa San. You come telephone?" Jimmy leaned across the table and spoke to Mimosa.

"Can you show us where they went?" asked he.

Before the girl could answer, the waitress repeated earnestly: "You come telephone, Mimosa San—you come now."

Their Married Life

Warren Gets His Ring Back

Copyright, 1916, International News Service.

"Mother writes that Winifred is just fine, dear," said Helen delightfully, after they were settled in the living room after dinner. Warren was in his usual after-dinner posture, a lighted cigar in his mouth. Helen, in a white dress, was curled up under the lamp, reading for the second time a letter from home.

She scanned greedily every bit of news she could get about Winifred. Somehow it seemed harder than ever to spare the child this Summer. Helen did not realize that the more companionable the child became the older she grew, the harder it would be to do without her for even short spaces of time.

"I do hope no one bothers us tonight," Helen said after she had finished the letter and had folded it up and consigned it to its envelope. "It's so nice and cosy here, and I feel lazy too, and I have a good book to read."

Warren looked up and smiled. To tell the truth he had not heard a thing Helen had said, but it was pleasant enough to have her rambling on in a monotone, that is, when it didn't happen to annoy him.

Ten minutes elapsed and Helen raised her head to consult the clock—eight twenty-five. She hardly thought that any one would bother them now, and with a little sigh of contentment she returned to her book. At the same moment the bell rang.

"Now, I wonder who that is," Helen pouted.

She waited while Mary came in from the kitchen and opened the door, and then the girl came to the door of the living room and beckoned to Helen. Helen rose; at least it was no one they knew dropping in to spend an evening at cards or something of the kind. Whoever it was she could probably dispense with in a hurry.

Out in the hall a shabby man stood. He twirled an old felt hat in his hands, but his face was bright and alert and he smiled at Helen from twinkling blue eyes.

"Are you Mrs. Curtis?" he inquired politely.

Helen nodded.

"I could I see your husband for a few minutes, please?"

"Why, certainly, come right in," Helen responded cordially, and led the way into the cosy living room.

Warren rose and Helen said simply, "The gentleman wants to see you, Warren."

"Of course you don't know me, Mr. Curtis," the shabby stranger began, "but I am Ted Brown's father."

THE RING COMES BACK

Helen recalled vaguely that Warren's office boy was called Ted Brown.

"You missed a ring, didn't you, sir? A queer looking thing in the shape of a snake."

Warren acquiesced, and Helen smiled to herself.

"I might as well come right to the point," the stranger was saying. He was sitting in one of the comfortable chairs and he still clung to the shabby felt hat. "Ted just told me that he had taken the ring. I don't know what possessed the boy; he's a good boy and I have always found him honest, but he took it."

"How did it happen?" Warren asked, gently enough. Helen looked at him in surprise.

"Ted told me this evening that he had the ring," the man went on. "He said he always wanted it from the first time he had ever seen it on your finger. He said it was the only ring he ever liked, and when he found it early in the morning on the wash basin, he just slipped it on his finger and couldn't find it in his heart to part with it.

"Of course I don't expect you to understand, sir, but the boy is sorry; he told me tonight that he just couldn't bear to keep it any longer; that he hadn't slept since it happened. I thought I'd better come right up and bring it to you, and if you don't mind—Ted is young, you know—you won't have him punished."

"Of course not," said Helen, horrified.

The man turned to her.

Of course I don't expect Mr. Curtis to keep him. I told Ted that; but if you'll just give him another chance to make good. You see, it would kill his mother if anything happened.

The man pulled a little box out of his pocket, and handed it over to Warren.

"There it is, sir safe and sound."

Warren undid the wrappings, and there, reposing on a bed of pink cotton, was the missing ring. He had never expected to see it again, and never would have if it had not been for the unexpected honesty of an utter stranger.

WARREN IS THANKFUL

"I don't know what to say to you," Mr. Brown," Warren said, "but I certainly am obliged to you. I wouldn't have lost the ring for a great deal, and it means a lot to have it back. You tell Ted that I shall expect him back in his old place on Monday. We all make mistakes, you know, and I don't want to be the one to judge this boy. We'll see how well he works. And as for you, I want to give you a little something for your trouble."

And Warren slipped a bill into the hard hand.

"Oh, no," the man protested. "I don't need anything for doing the only thing I could do."

"Take it and buy a present for your wife," Warren urged. "She doesn't know how you got the money. You earned it all right. I'll bet it wasn't an easy thing to come up here and tell me what you did."

Warren slipped the bill into the man's pocket and then turned to Helen as the outer door closed.

"Well, what do you know about that?" he exclaimed.

"Do you want to know what I really think?" Helen asked with spirit.

"Sure," Warren responded good naturedly.

"Well I think it ought to be a lesson to you in honesty. You didn't have any scruples about keeping change that didn't belong to you the other night; you said you would feel like a fool going back and telling the man that he had given you too much. But this man had no scruples about coming up here and telling you that his son was a thief. Just think it over, Warren Curtis, I think I am right."

Another installment in this attractive series will appear here soon.

Anecdotes of the Famous

The late Colonel Anstruther Thomson, in his "Eighty Years' Reminiscences," tells the story of a remarkable marriage.

Of the many quaint "characters" whom Colonel Anstruther Thomson met in the hunting-field none captivate the imagination like the brothers Leamon, of Ivybridge—"Two tiny, delicate-looking old men, twin brothers, seventy-two years old, with white hair, very gentle and courteous in manner, red cut-away coats, white cords, black boots, caps, and gloves. Most respectable and nothing stangy about them; they are so alike you can hardly tell them apart."

When past sixty years of age, one night after hunting, one of them said to the other—

"I have been thinking neither of us have much longer to live in this world, and it will be a terrible thing for the survivor to have to remain here alone. Don't you think one of us ought to marry?"

"Yes," was the reply. "I have thought so for a long time."

"Well, so you are going to wed any lady?"

"Yes, I do. Is there anyone you fancy?"

On comparing notes it appeared they had both selected the same woman, the manageress of the hotel at Okehampton.

"Well," said one, "we have lived together all these years without a wry word, and it's a pity we should fall out at our time of life."

So they tossed up which should marry her. The winner rode down to Okehampton next morning, and was accepted. All three lived together, and the wife nursed both brothers in their last illness, and was left their money.

The best story in H. G. Hibbert's new book, "Fifty Years of a Londoner's Life," is the following:

"It used to be the annual custom of Mr. Ledger (the proprietor of the Era) to entertain the theatrical celebrities of the day at dinner and to commemorate the occasion by some Lucullan freak.

He once had eighty strawberry plants carefully nurtured in pots so that at dessert he might say to his guests, each opposite a blooming strawberry plant: 'Now, my dear friends—gather your own fruit.'

The service seemed slow. Ledger cried to his maid:

"Come, come! The dessert!"

"In a minute, sir!" was the reply. "They've merely finished picking the strawberries!"

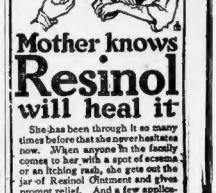
Are You a Tiger Man or an Ox Man?

The careful examination of 500 bodies shows that mankind is divided into the two great classes, as explained in next Sunday's Boston AMERICAN.

Too Thick

A shoemaker was fitting a customer with a pair of boots, when the buyer observed that he had but one objection to them, which was that the soles were a little too thick.

"If that is all," replied the shoemaker, "put on the boots, and the objection will gradually wear away."



Mother knows Resinol will heal it

She has been through it so many times before that she never hesitates now. When anyone in the family comes to her with a spot of eczema or an itching rash, she gets out the jar of Resinol Ointment and gives prompt relief. And a few applications seldom fail to clear away the irritation completely.

Resinol Ointment is an excellent healing dressing, too, for burns, scalds, cuts and other little sores. Sold by all druggists, or sample free, write to Dept 4-R, Resinol, Baltimore, Md. Use Resinol Soap for shaving.

BAY STATE BOYS APPEAR LIKE REGULARS

By BERT FORD.

Second Massachusetts Brigade Headquarters, El Paso, Tex., Aug. 29.—Anyone who thinks the Plattsburgers are put through a more strenuous routine than the National Guard on the border ought to drop in at Camp Cotton, strap on full field equipment and take the hikes that the regiments of Massachusetts infantrymen are forced to take daily.

And these hikes are only part of the day's work. They are topped off by all sorts of manoeuvering on the mesa where five regiments in evolutions simultaneously are almost lost to view, the landscape is rough and expansive, a better stage for the working out of all sorts of problems, from squads to brigades, could not be found in the country.

TEN-MILE HIKE DAILY.

As far as the vision carries one sees troops in a variety of drills during the morning hours, ranging from company control and skirmished to regimental reviews. The Michigan troops have been working out with the Bay State infantrymen. The regiments from both States have had to march to and from their camps to this wonderful theatre of practice, a good ten miles, exclusive of ground covered in drilling.

Ten miles in a hot sun, even if the hikes are made in "route step," which means that the men may carry their rifles any way they please and not keep in step as long as proper distances and alignment are observed, is work, but before and after said marches the Bay State infantrymen have to carry out camp routine and fill no end of details afternoons. In fact, the pace has been so strenuous that some of the officers and men feel they are getting more than their share, while the regulars are having it soft.

But all hands realize how much they have profited in physique and experience by these marches made without music, save the shuffle of hundreds of feet and occasional whistling. The first day quite a few were forced to fall out in the Michigan regiments and the number was less in the Bay State ranks. On the fourth day every Massachusetts soldier finished.

BAY STATE BOYS LIKE REGULARS.

The first three or four weeks the men were purposely given an easy program to permit them to become acclimated, but since then they have worked and made amazing progress. Army officers acknowledge that the Massachusetts units are "more like regulars in discipline and appearance than any militia organization on the border."

To meet the new program the Massachusetts men now arise at 5:15, a half-hour earlier, and every hour is made to count.

General E. Leroy Sweetser feels proud of his brigade and the praise it is receiving from all sides. He has introduced a feature unknown in the militia from other States by which the men are assured of plenty of nourishing food. He has made it mandatory for a mess officer detailed from each company to report daily the kind and amount of food served and he finds the time personally to drop around and see for himself. As a result the Bay State "chow" is of a high and satisfactory order.

PLAN TO RECALL THE REV. DR. AKED

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 29.—Dr. Charles F. Aked, known as the "Rockefeller pastor," who resigned his pastorate in the First Congregational Church to join a recent peace expedition in Europe, may be recalled to this city if a strong minority of his former congregation can win their way.

All sides in a factional fight in the congregation admit, after several weeks' dissension over selecting a successor to Dr. Aked, the controversy has narrowed down to the question of the latter's reappointment.

NEW YORK LEATHER WORKERS TO STRIKE

New York, Aug. 29.—Twelve thousand leather workers of New York and vicinity will go on strike today. The call, issued yesterday by the Traveling Goods and Leather Novelty Workers' International Union, instructs the strikers to be orderly. The workers demand union recognition, shorter hours and higher wages.

EIGHTEEN BANDITS CAPTURED AND SHOT

Chihuahua, Aug. 29.—In a fight with a band of Villa followers at Corralitos, General Domingo Arrieta took eighteen prisoners who were tried by a court-martial and shot.

Motor Notes.

By J. C. KERRISON.

Otis C. Friend, the general sales manager of the Mitchell Motors Company, who resigned recently to become assistant to the president of the United Motors Corporation, was given a banquet on August 15 at the Racine, Wis., Club. His associates in the Mitchell Company, with which he was identified for seventeen years, made him their guest of honor and wished him success in his new work.

Gaston, Williams & Wigmore, Inc., the New York city export house that is so prominent in handling sales of American cars abroad, has just secured an order for 2,400 Peerless trucks. Deliveries are to commence immediately and the Peerless Truck & Motor Corporation of Cleveland is to ship from eighty to 100 trucks weekly until late in 1917.

George H. Lawrence of the Rissel-Kar Company of New England announces that the factory is adding two more buildings to its plant at Hartford, Wis. When these are finished more than 60,000 square feet of floor space will have been completed during 1916. Still further expansion plans are under way.

The Metz Automobile Company, Waltham, has decided to give up all its factory branches, which now are to be placed in charge of local agents, who in turn will be under the jurisdiction of State managers. The company found that its branches were not profitable and reached the decision that the cost of operating them was out of proportion to their value.

It is easy to haggle with figures and talk "millions" without meaning. But after you have sat half through the presentation of Thos. H. Ince's epoch-making spectacle, and seen vast multitudes in action, big government buildings and entire sections of towns and cities wrecked before your awed eyes, immense ships blown to pieces, scenes of almost inconceivable magnitude staged for merely a moment's thrill—you are quite ready to believe that over a million dollars was actually expended in producing "Civilization." But the money expenditure, vast as it is, is as nothing compared to the genius, the histrionic power, the almost superhuman effort, that have made "Civilization" what the New York Journal called it—

"The greatest spectacle ever conceived by the brain of man."

STOCKS AND INVESTMENTS

Railroad troubles—the labor wage controversy at Washington and the appointment of a receiver for the Boston & Maine, in Boston—were the principal factors in the market during the morning hours, and were said to be responsible for the weakness manifested.

There was a sharp rally just before noon, but most of the issues continued to sell lower than yesterday's close in New York. Reading and New York Central were the leading gainers, coppers generally showed loss-

Sanfords Ginger

Makes life worth living through hot weather for those who suffer from heat, exhaustion, insomnia, poor stomachs or weak bowels or nerves.

A delicious combination of ginger, aromatics and French brandy for the relief of cramps, pains, colds, chills, malaria, nervousness and insomnia. Look for the Owl Trade Mark on the wrapper, for you get a sharp, warming, dangerous substitute. Forty years the standard of purity, flavor and strength. Sold by all druggists and grocers.

Nervous Periodical Headaches

This trouble commonly called "sick headache, is said to be due to the retention of urea in the system. Often it is stated that a poor condition of the blood is a cause of these headaches, or that it is a nervous condition; and in certain cases, no doubt this is true.

Where treatment is demanded, it is known for the pain it stops, namely, aspirin, and Dr. A. F. Schellschlaeidt, of Louisville, has found anti-kamnia tablets to give prompt and satisfactory relief. "Rest should be insisted upon," he says, "and the patient should be placed alone in the room, and all the attendants and family should be as quiet as possible. An emetic will sometimes shorten the attack. The bowels should be kept open with "Actolds"; a hot bath and a short, rough rub-down with a coarse towel, often give grateful relief. Two anti-kamnia tablets with the first signs appear, will usually prevent the attack. During an attack, two tablets every hour or two will shorten the attack and relieve the usual distress and vomiting. These tablets may be obtained at all druggists. Ask for A-K Tablets. They are also unexcelled for nervous headaches, neuralgia and all pains.

The Protraction of the European War Will Mean "Revolution," "Anarchy," "Bankruptcy" and Financial Prostration

August 28, 1916.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE AMERICAN:

One year ago I wrote a communication to the AMERICAN on the inadvisability and impropriety, to put it mildly, of peace-loving Americans subscribing to foreign loans whose only purpose was the protraction of the murderous European war.

It seems to me that there is no essential alteration in the present situation from that of a year ago.

The European war can be protracted indefinitely if the contending nations can receive from the United States arms and ammunition and money to continue murdering each other's people; and if the war is continued indefinitely it will result in the utter devastation and prostration of Europe and the destruction of a large part of the Caucasian race.

To provide European nations, therefore, with the money to continue their murderous warfare is not only an evil and inhuman thing to do, but it is an unwise and unsafe thing.

It is an unwise and unsafe thing for our nation, because the destruction or debilitation of the white race makes the Yellow Peril ever more of a menace and exposes our Western civilization to the inevitable onslaught of the yellow nations, with less possibility of support and protection from Europe.

It is an unwise and unsafe thing for the individual to do because, as I said in my communication of a year ago, if this war is protracted a sufficiently long time the end of the war will result in revolution and anarchy, the overthrowing of the governments that are making this war and the repudiation of the debts which they have incurred.

This is not a radical view of the situation which I alone hold. Indeed, a great many authoritative and conservative thinkers, both in Europe and America, have voiced the same opinion.

Shortly after my communication was printed in the AMERICAN, an article by Lord Beresford appeared in this paper. The article was written especially for the London Times and the AMERICAN and published in London as well as in America. In the course of the article Lord Beresford said:

"We began the war with two great assets, the fleet and our wealth. The second asset is being squandered by millions, without business supervision or adequate return. WE SHALL SOON BE BANKRUPT IF THIS GOES ON."

A few weeks later Earl Loreburn arose in the House of Lords and warned Parliament and the nation of a tremendous revolution if the European conflict were prolonged. Earl Loreburn said:

"Unless the collective common sense of mankind prevails before the worst comes, Europe will be little better than a wilderness peopled by old men, women and children."

Earl Loreburn concluded with the following serious statement:

"It is no exaggeration to say that if the war continues indefinitely REVOLUTION or ANARCHY may well follow."

Of course every one knows that Lord Beresford and Earl Loreburn are not irresponsible or unimportant individuals.

Lord Beresford is Retired Admiral of the British Navy and the foremost authority in the world in his sphere.

Earl Loreburn was formerly High Chancellor of England.

Both of these men are as able as they are notable, and as conservative as they are able.

In the House of Commons, Andrew Bonar Law, Secretary for the Colonies, said some weeks later that England had to risk "BANKRUPTCY" to bring the war to successful conclusion, and declared that the situation was "EXTREMELY DANGEROUS."

He further said that the moment the time came when "the country could not raise indefinite loans—and if the war lasted long enough it would come—the country would have to find other means for carrying on the war."

The ablest financial authority in England is Sir George Paish. In a public address he said:

"England is carrying the financial burden of the war. The adverse trade balance, if we include what we have done for our allies, is already between six hundred million pounds (three thousand million dollars) and seven hundred million pounds (three thousand five hundred million dollars), to balance which we have succeeded in borrowing fifty million pounds (about two hundred and fifty million dollars), our moiety of the American loan.

"If we go on spending money as we are now, we shall see another break in American exchange, accompanied by a break in Canadian, Argentine, Australian and Indian exchanges. This probably will mean the SUSPENSION OF SPECIE PAYMENTS, and we should have to tell the world WE WERE UNABLE TO PAY OUR DEBTS."

Premier Asquith himself in one of his most important speeches, delivered some months ago before the expenditures of Great Britain had reached anything like their present amount, said:

"The financial situation of Great Britain is SERIOUS, and the nation must be prepared to make far greater sacrifices than it has yet done to enable it to sustain the burden imposed by the war."

A manifesto issued by the leading bankers of England in the latter part of last year contained the following statement:

"In the current calendar year the British people will spend $6,500,000,000 on war and government. Next year they will spend nine thousand million dollars. To raise this sum is a stupendous task, which will try the mettle of the nation as it has not been tried in a hundred years."

The above are simply samples of statements that have been made by the leaders of English thought in various spheres regarding the possible, pending insolvency of England and the eventual "revolution" and "bankruptcy" which a continuation of this war would cause.

Judge Elbert H. Gary, the head of the Steel Trust and a leading financial authority in the United States, has said:

"The destruction of property [by this war], aggregating billions of dollars, will be felt throughout the world.

"Add to this the consequences of the awful destruction of life, and it is understood how much we Americans are interested in the speedy termination of the war."

The question before the American people who are asked to subscribe to war loans of any of the contending nations is whether this war will be protracted indefinitely and whether we Americans desire to be responsible for the indefinite protraction of it, and for the disaster and destruction, the future danger and further injury which, as Judge Gary says, all the world, including ourselves, will share.

There is no present prospect of a termination of the war on purely military grounds. The war situation is not materially different today from what it was a year ago, when England asked her first loan of the United States.

Since that date small gains in territory amounting to about forty square miles have been made by the allies on the western front; but, to far more than counteract that, practically all of Poland and much Russian territory has been gained by the Teutons on the eastern front, aggregating about eighty thousand square miles.

The prospect of the termination of the war, therefore, by an overwhelming military success on either side is extremely remote.

The war, therefore, will probably continue until the exhaustion of men and money on the part of all the combatants is so great that the war can no longer be conducted.

Why do Americans wish to loan money to bring about such complete destruction and exhaustion of Europe? And what value will their loans have when such complete financial prostration shall have been reached?

The duty of this country and of the people of this country is to move to promote peace, not to protract war.

The opportunity of this country to render a signal service to the world and to benefit itself as well as other nations is to unite with other neutral nations everywhere and to withhold all money and all supplies until peace negotiations are begun.

The neutral nations of the world can compel peace and the United States, first in power, first in civilized development, first in humanitarian principles, should lead the way.

WAR LOAN OPPOSED TO U. S. INTERESTS, SAYS W. R. HEARST

New Orleans, Sept. 19.

The following statement appears in the New Orleans Item:

"I am going to New York to oppose the war loan to the battling nations of Europe, and oppose it as strongly as I knew how. I do not believe that such a loan is for the interest of the country. It is plainly for the interest and special advantage of some financiers who are not noted for considering the interest of this country, or for considering anything but their own profit and benefit.

"It is not for the interest of this country to become too closely identified with either side of this European conflict. It is not for the interest of this country to begin lending money to what may be the losing side, and then have to lend more money in the hope of making our first loans good, and finally become overwhelmingly involved in what may become a great financial catastrophe. For, remember, we have not only war in Europe to face, but eventually possible revolution and repudiation.

"It is not to the interest of this country to have money tight in this country. We have had hard times for a long period, and the explanation has been tight money, the balance of trade against us, shipments of gold abroad and insufficient funds at home.

"Now, money is becoming plentiful here. The times are getting better. Money is seeking investment here at home. There is money to back new enterprises, and new enterprises mean greater employment and better times for the working people as well as easier times for the employer.

"Why change all of this? Why send our money abroad that we all admit we have needed here at home and that is just beginning to work its beneficial results here at home?

"Why start a movement which will probably grow—for the gorge of the modern Moloch of War is insatiable—until America is drained of its much-needed gold? Why kill the goose that lays the golden egg? Or, if you prefer a more exact metaphor, why export the golden eggs just as they are beginning to hatch into the long-awaited goslings of a new prosperity?

"Why sacrifice the interest of this country for the benefit of Wall Street?

"Is Wall Street so popular throughout the country? Is Wall Street so unsophisticated that we must look out for its interest above our own interest? Is Wall Street so unselfish? Has it so often sacrificed its own interest in the past that it is our duty to sacrifice our individual interest for it now?

"It is easy to understand why certain big banking houses, led by the able and ambitious young Mr. Morgan, should want to extend this loan to England. Mr. Morgan is practically an Englishman. He is the representative of England financially in the United States. He has invested his money with the allies and wants to see his investments guaranteed. He is the head of the Steel Trust, and the Steel Trust profits with every gun and shell furnished fighting Europe.

"But why should the American people be led by Mr. Morgan? Why should the American people's money—for it is their money that will be lent—be the golden ring which will drag them about by the nose in the wake of Mr. Morgan's English investments?

"That is the material side of this question; and there is a moral side as well, which must be considered, for the American people are a moral people. They are a righteous and religious people; they are a God-fearing, peace-loving people. Our people hope and pray for peace for ourselves and for the stricken nations of Europe. We abhor war, and we have condemned this particular war as the worst and most wicked of all wars.

"We have sorrowed for the soldiers of our own Caucasian race slain by the thousands—yea, by millions—upon the field of battle. We have grieved for wretched wives made widows, and for helpless orphans thrown upon a world made brutal and barren by war. We have bemoaned the accumulated wealth of ages ruthlessly destroyed, the treasures of art and architecture recklessly demolished, the very foundations of Occidental civilization and religion weakened, if not wrecked, by the fury and frenzy of this fratricidal conflict.

"We have gone into our churches or unto the sanctuaries of our homes and prayed to God to restore peace on earth and revive good will among men.

"We have besought God to preserve our race, to protect our civilization, to conserve the wealth and the treasures of the world for the world, to end this needless, endless sorrow and slaughter, desolation and destruction.

"And God has heard our prayer. He has created a situation which is a supreme test of our sincerity. He has made it come to pass that this war cannot continue unless we who have prayed for peace shall supply the arms and the money to protract the war.

"What shall we do?

"Shall we go back into our churches and unto the sanctuaries of our homes and say: 'Lord, when we prayed for peace we had not considered the financial side of the situation. We had not figured up the profit we might make out of further bloodshed.

"'We had not estimated the income on the guns and shells to kill our brothers in Europe or the interest on the loans to continue the war. We had not thought of the dollars that could be gained in making orphans and widows, of the money that might be minted out of the tears of the weeping mothers.

"'Lord, God, we thought we wanted peace, but that was before we balanced up our books. We thought we wanted peace, but we found that, like Judas Iscariot, we needed the money.'

"Citizens of the United States, must we say this? Must we retract all our prayers, renounce all our principles?

"Let us hope not, for if we do repent thus and act thus it would probably be better for us if we had never been born.

"We have coined money out of evil before and paid the bitter penalty. Many an American dollar was made by bringing hapless negroes into this country and trafficking in them as slaves.

"The Yankee traders brought them and made money for themselves; the Southern planters bought them and made money for themselves. Each laid up abundance of treasure on earth and abundance of retribution in heaven.

"The sins of the fathers shall be visited upon the children even unto the third and fourth generation. And in due time the red lifeblood of atonement was shed for every black and tarnished dollar as evilly gained.

"Shall we again accumulate an evil hoard and invite a cruel retribution?

"Shall we not rather take advantage of the power and opportunity which God has placed in our hands and end this hideous war, which is a menace to the progress and prosperity of all the world and to the continued domination of the white race which should be a blessing and a benefit to all the world?

"Is there not both moral satisfaction and material advantage in the righteous course?

"Shall we not make peace while the power is in our hands, and rely for our reward upon Him who said:

"'Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God?'
